This chronicle of the kitchen garden tracks it from dreamtime to real time. We follow the sowing and reaping of the garden's fruits and vegetables along with Michelle Obama's ideas for getting kids to eat right. This beautifully-written and photographed chronicle offers a fitting four score and seven recipes. The recipes come from the Obama White House and earlier presidential households. Community gardens across America also contributed kid-approved recipes!

Food writer Clara Silverstein contributes to the Boston Globe, is the author of The Boston Chef's Table and coauthor of the bestselling New England Soup Factory Cookbook.

A Reader's Cookbook

BY JUDITH CHOATE

This generous and handsome book—larded with delightful literary quotes about food—offers hungry readers a recipe to match almost any literary setting, utopia or dystopia included. The distinguished food writer Judith Choate reads almost as much as she cooks—and that's saying something. Here she offers readers—solo or as book group members—a way to amplify their understanding of the culture of a novel, memoir or poem.

Her recipes appeal to multiple senses and are easy to make. Some are aimed at teatime while others are for cocktail hour. For each of her 17-plus regional tables, star entrees and wickedly “delicious asides” are also offered. Many are for transportable dishes, truly intended to be part of a moveable feast.

Judith Choate is the writing partner of such chefs as Charlie Palmer, David Burke and Jacques Torres as well as the sole author of distinguished cookbooks. She is the “Judie” behind the popular blog, NotesfromJudiesKitchen@wordpress.com

A Christmas Dinner by Charles Dickens

“Would that Christmas lasted a whole year as it ought.”

So wrote “Charles Dickens in this, his first Christmas story. In 1835, he had the novel idea that Christmas should be a family celebration, including forgiveness, fun, gifts and feasting. The book includes menus and Dickens-family recipes adapted by the distinguished culinary historian Alice Ross. The story is introduced by esteemed Dickens biographer Peter Ackroyd, chief literary critic of The Times of London.

CELEBRATION The Christmas Cat Book

BY MARGARET DENK

In this lively and informative little book, Margaret Denk uses Christmas card images from 1885 to 1927 to chronicle Christmas cats. Chapter 1 looks at "Cozy Christmas Cats," beloved by Victorians. Chapter 2 considers the "Good-Luck Black Cat." Chapter 3 looks at "Almost Human Christmas Cats," busy with chores and full of cheeky charm.

Margaret Denk, a producer of short films, loves pets. She lives in Chicago.

CELEBRATION Santa Comes to Town

BY AGATHA E. GILMORE

Before he was round, Santa was slim. He has been seen as a saint, and as a gift-giver with a dangerous traveling companion named Black Pete. Santa has been painted trudging through the snow, on a donkey, or doing his best on Nordic skis. The pictorial evidence on old Christmas cards of Santa's complicated past is intelligently interpreted here by a Santa student with a fine sense of whimsy.

Journalist Agatha E. Gilmore lives in Chicago.

CELEBRATION The Christmas Animal Book

BY CLINT VIEBROCK

On antique Christmas cards, the holiday commemorating the birth of Mary's son was celebrated by a diverse group of God's creatures. Small furred animals of the wood watched holiday preparations, while birds of many a feather delivered seasonal wishes. No merrier menagerie ever filled the pages of a stocking-stuffer.

Clint Viebrock, a retired airline pilot and current card collector, divides his time between Denver and Telluride, Colorado.

Christmas/Flora

CELEBRATION The Christmas Flower Book

BY NINA PINSKY

Many early Christmas cards had botanical themes with petals of meanings. Mistletoe had been noted by the ancient Celts. Poinsettia, a New World bloom, came only late to be associated with Christmas. A rose was not just a rose to the Victorians, who spoke a floral dialect on holiday cards. Author Nina Pinsky interprets the hidden meanings of the flowers pictured in this charming treasury.

Nina Pinsky uses the language of flowers in decorating festive tables in San Francisco and Manhattan.

Thank You, Teacher, Because . . .

BY DAISY BARTH

This charming and useful book was born when Daisy, then 11, said, "Why can't I find a book that I can give my teacher?" She decided to create one. And now, elementary and middle school kids everywhere can give it to their favorite teachers. This is a book from the heart that shows—in word and bright drawing—what kids really appreciate about teachers.

. . . you answer stupid questions.

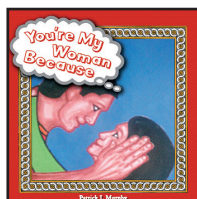

. . . you laughed at my joke.

. . . you don't play favorites.

Daisy Barth goes to school in Millbrook, N.Y.

The Amazing Menorah of Mazeltown

BY HAL DRESNER & JOY FATE · ILLUSTRATIONS BY NEIL SHAPIRO

Mazeltown, in the Cry-Me-a-River valley, was a dreary village on the dark, cold days leading up to Hanukkah. Then Molly and Max stumbled on a most curious object in their father's junkshop. It was old and grimy, but after they polished it a most amazing menorah emerged, a menorah that, night by night, changed Mazeltown: brightening the streets, lofting the bagels, making the river glow with life and lighting up everyone's heart.
